

---

Koala ruling up in the air

A DECISION on whether to make the koala a nationally threatened species has been postponed until February.

A Senate report into the marsupial's dwindling numbers was released in September and Federal Environment Minister Tony Burke wants more time to consider it. He will ask the Threatened Species Scientific Committee to provide him with updated advice ahead of his final decision.